President Ferdinand R. Marcos Jr.

Today, we all stand at a crossroads fighting multiple challenges.

But in the end, our success will be ultimately measured by how well we protect our peoples' security, welfare, and prosperity from the most imminent threats of climate change and poverty.

Let us commit to harness our collective strength, embrace the urgency of our mission, and drive integrated solutions that bring climate action and poverty eradication all together.

Let history judge us as the generation that reversed these twin tides, the generation that put an end to delay and inaction.

Let us become the coalition that worked hand in hand in steering the world faster and further on the road to a greener and more prosperous future that the next generations will proudly inherit.
